olstice for Halifax county of the State of North Carolina, Ex-Sheriff James T. Dawson was found dead in bed at his home in Littleton ...

Furgerson placed in nomination for sheriff a man who, he said, had made the very best sheriff Halifax county had ever had, Mr. James T. Dawson Sudden Death of Sheriff J. T. Dawson. Ex-Sheriff James T. Dawson was found dead in bed at his home in Littleton Saturday morning last. He had been in poor health for sometime, yet this sudden snapping of the brittle thread of life was a great shock to his family and friends. James T. Dawson was highly esteemed by all who knew him. In 1880 he was elected sheriff of Halifax county on the Republican ticket and his administration of the affairs of the office was such as to win for him the confidence and esteem of his political opponents. In 1896 he was re-elected on the fusion ticket and for the two years of the time he continued his former policy of clean and honest methods in conducting the ofHce and retired from office with many friends and few, if any, enemies. Sometime after retiring from the office of sheriff he was appointed postmaster at Halifax. He only remained in this office a short time, and then he resigned to look after his extensive farming operations, Mr. W.A. Willcox being appointed to the postmastership, which office he has continued to hold up to the present time. Sheriff Dawson leaves a wife and one son, Mr. Percy Dawson, who was recently married to Miss Eula Newsom, of Littleton.

Notes for James Henry Francis:

JAMES HENRY and PEARL C. FRANCIS A SON'S TRIBUTE

James Henry Francis, and his sister, Ella, were born to Josephine Francis Scott in a Single-parent household During his early childhood and after his mother's marriage to Mr. William Scott, Father James and his sister Ella were sent to live with their grandmother. At this early age, Father was entrusted into the awful responsibility of becoming the man of the household. This meant tilling a small acreage of land with an ox, caring for his ailing grandmother.

Even with an ailing grandmother and a sister to care for, he and his sister attended the public school on a somewhat regular basis, and completed a curriculum that would parallel the eighth grade today. They both joined the church and became supportive members. Upon the death of their grandmother, Aunt Ella married

Mr. James Davis, and Father James chose the young lady of his heart, Miss Pearl Martha Ann Clanton whose family background could be seen closely paralleling that of his own. The difference being, her family consisted of four sisters: Aunt Hatty, Mary, Josie, and Sally Ann, and one brother, Jimmy as well as mother, Nancy Roberson. Uncle Jimmy and Aunt Sally Ann became very prosperous landowners in their own right.

Generation 3 (con't)

-- ::Lately after marriage, Father and Mother launched into two enterprises that proved rather courageous and adventurous. . They invested their somewhat limited resources in a community grocery store, while at the same time began rearing a family. Their merchandizing business prospered to the extent that they were able to enjoy the distinction of owning a horse and a buggy. A rare status symbol to be enjoyed by such a newlywed couple in those days. The skill and determination with which this young couple managed their family business caught the eyes and won the respect of several community leaders and landowners.

==Delmar

Located midway between Halifax and Enfield along the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, the community known today as Delmar initially took shape in 1905 when a consortium of eight African Americans organized by Joe Silver acquired the two-thousand-acre "Pomery" tract of land from the Norfleet family. Containing significant timber resources, this tract, located just west of the railroad and Marsh Swamp, was purchased for $10,000 over a ten-year period. In addition to Silver, the original investors were half-brothers Elijah and Dudley Jones, Robert Copeland, G. Jackson Scott, Ed Scott, Willie Jones, and Robert Jones. Each investor received a portion of the property, averaging approximately two hundred acres, on which to develop a farm.

An evangelist preacher, Joe Silver led the farm cooperative, collaborating with each member to help maintain its financial stability and ensure agricultural success. (He did not move to the property)~ however, until 1906.) Initially; most of these men were skilled in cutting shingles and logging, with only a basic familiarity with farming. They strove to develop self-sufficient farms growing crops of corn, peas, cotton, and tobacco. Unable to make a positive contribution to the venture, Willie Jones soon sold his interest to Silver. In 1911, James H. Francis became the only new investor in the cooperative. His land included, however, a portion of Willie Jones's former land. Over time, the Francis farm exemplified the self-sufficient goals of the cooperative. Francis was a prosperous farmer, but he did not raise tobacco because he considered it a "gambling crop."

Financially, the cooperative managed each year to meet the mortgage payments. Applauding its efforts, E. L. Travis, a lawyer in Halifax, actively encouraged and financially aided the community. By 1910 all but three of the seven owned their own farms free of a mortgage. The cooperative cutting of enough timber from the entire tract resolved the final mortgage payment on the Norfleet property, and the surplus was divided equally. In all likelihood, Dudley Jones was involved with the construction of many of the buildings in the area.'

The cooperative's dream also included the development of a centralized community near the railroad. In 1914, a portion of the original Norfleet tract located east of the railroad tracks and west of Marsh Swamp was divided among the original investors into eight lots fronting along the tracks. The area was recognized by the name Delmar as early as 1916. In that year, Joe Silver deeded one acre to the Delmar Manufacturing Company, a firm established by trading partners G. J. Scott and A. M. Silver. On November 21, 1917, however, a post office named "Log" was established near the railroad tracks, and Charles Lawler became its first postmaster. Julian T. Moss, John E. Blades, and James B. Garremon followed him before the post office was discontinued on October 15, 1925. This community included a barrel stave mill, a store, a hotel, and several residences:'

Joe Silver's concept for his property paralleling the west side of the railroad tracks was laid out in a plat dated May' 9, 1918. The plan delineated four principal streets and eight blocks.

Generation 3 (con't)

Lot sizes varied, with the larger ones near the railroad tracks. Streets were named Halifax, Railroad, Silver, and Main. Over time, however, little development occurred.'

Although Silver's vision for Delmar never materialized, the cooperative tradition of the community was advanced in February 1949 with the formal incorporation of the Delmar Cooperative. Members of the Silver, Scott, and Francis families were principals within the cooperative. Headquartered in Enfield, this organization encouraged more efficient collective buying of farm supplies and selling of farm products."

In recent years the name Delmar has come to represent the rural community associated with the farming cooperative. Many residents are descendants of the area's early investors. No evidence of the settlement or barrel stave mill remains, however, except for the alignment of the power lines indicating the presence of a former rail siding.

In 1937 Thomas Adickes, a WPA writer, characterized this one-and-a-half-story frame house as the mark of a "very prosperous" farmer. In 1911 James H. Francis joined the cooperative farming consortium of African Americans organized by Joe Silver in 1905. He began building this house in 1924 using materials salvaged from buildings being dismantled in Halifax. He moved here in 1926. By 1937 Francis's farm was virtually self sufficient, providing all food needed except for tea, coffee, and sugar. According to Adickes, it encompassed two hundred orchard trees, vineyards, vegetable plots that produced three hundred canned goods per year, three hundred chickens, five mules, and modern farm equipment, seemingly the most prosperous of the Delmar farms during the Depression years. The Francis house takes the form of a gabled bungalow with eaves to the front, side, and rear. Exposed rafter ends, simple purlin brackets, three-over-one sash windows, and square posts on brick pedestals supporting a small engaged porch are typical Bungalow elements. The arched window and bands of beveled shingles in the gablefront eave are typically Victorian.

Interior finish, characterized by plaster walls and tongue-and-groove wainscots and ceilings, is standard early twentieth century. However, the - salvaged wainscot in the rear eave has Georgian raised panels.

Through the years the family has made several alterations to the house. In the 1950s asbestos shingles obscured the plain weatherboard sheathing. Also, Francis's son, Eddie Rufus, enclosed the side porch in 1975 and added an attached carport to the opposing side elevation.

The house is situated in a quiet setting at the end of a road. Cultivated fields still provide sustenance for the Francis family and an agricultural setting, though the orchards and early outbuildings were removed.

VIII. BASIC VALUES

1. I believe each individual was sent to the world for a definite purpose and with a specific talent to share. Therefore, it becomes each person's responsibility to recognize that purpose, discover and develop his talent and to use it to the fullest extent in whatever area of endeavor his ability and opportunity might provide.

2. I believe the life of service through honest and purposeful work ethics is the life that counts and happiness can be achieved when we extend our concern and efforts toward the welfare of others.

3. I believe God's richest blessings are in store for those who, first recognize

Generation 3 (con't)

Him and embrace the concept that humility, love, faith, justice and self-respect are prerequisites to one's respect for God and the rights and dignity of his fellowmen.

4. I believe learning is a continuous, life-long process and the most economical and effective source of learning is from those who have withstood the test and challenge of ages before us.

IX. ADVICE TO YOUNGER FAMILY MEMBERS

1. Do recognize and learn of your life purpose, discover and develop your talent and set your goals early in life, because life is too short to waste.

2. Education is extremely important in this age: dig deep, for today and tomorrow's world will certainly demand it.

3. Develop good habits now because your future, your health, your happiness and even your life will be influenced by them.

4. First develop a sense of respect for yourself, and you will in return, learn to respect the dignity and rights of others.

5. Set up your objectives and priorities early in life; pursue them diligently; don't be afraid to think independently; and learn to say "NO" to those who try to change your course.

6. Do not forget, God is the answer. If you recognize and serve him with all your heart, he will direct your path.

"Your task is to build a better world," said God.

And I answered, "How?"

The world is such a large, vast place and oh, so complicated, now

And I am so small and useless,

There is nothing I can do."

But God, in all his wisdom said:

"Just build a better you."

Dear Mr. Francis:

On behalf of the Brunswick Community College Foundation, I want to express our deep appreciation for your generosity in establishing the Annie E. Francis Memorial Endowment Scholarship. This gift of $10,000.00 has been invested, and the income will be used as a scholarship for Brunswick County residents who are handicapped or dependents of a handicapped resident, who are enrolled in a two year degree program, and who maintain a 2.0 average.

We appreciate this endowment and the many ways you support BCC. As a loyal friend, you are making a great contribution to the College, its students, and its programs. Your commitment inspires us to maintain high standards of educational excellence and to seek and reward diversity among our students.

Generation 3 (con't)

We will strive to be worthy of your confidence.

Your long standing active role in education is helping to build a brighter future in Brunswick County. Thank you again for your generous support.
